

OOLONG TEE

Lace panel v-neck tee with short or long sleeves

OOLONG TEE

The Oolong Tee is a pretty and romantic tee with set-in sleeves. It features dramatic lace panels that resemble oolong leaves, which split to form a modest v-neck that frames the face perfectly in rib or I-cord finish. The finished sweater or tee is incredibly versatile and easy to style.

Worked bottom up from the hem, this pattern can be knit with long or short set-in sleeves, and is perfect for any season. The lace adds the perfect touch for effortless elegance in any outfit.

Based on the best-selling Oolong Tank, this is a great alternative with more coverage for those who prefer a tee!

Materials & Tools

Yarn Selection

For a summer weight tee, try a cellulose blend such as Wooldreamers' Saona, shown here on Aimee in the colorway 'Atlas.'

Alternative yarns might include: De Rerum Natura Candide, Purl Soho Linen Quill, or Knitting For Olive Pure Silk or Cotton Merino.

Construction Notes

- Sweater is cast on at the hem, then worked up circularly in one piece to the underarm. The front and back are separated and finished separately, and joined with 3-Needle Joinery.
- The sleeves are picked up with short rows worked for the sleeve cap, then finished in the round. Pattern includes instructions for long tapered sleeves and short tee-length sleeves.
- The hem is intended to be between high and full hip. You can lengthen or shorten the body by adding/removing rows between shaping.
- The neckline is picked up and worked as either rib or with I-cord finishing.
